

Coxwold Local History Society: what are we about?

Coxwold and its immediate locality has had people of endeavour and character shape its physical nature and culture over centuries...its buildings, roads, pathways, and traditions all contribute to our local style. Our aim is to present and communicate Coxwold's vibrant history and make it more accessible to all comers.

Its history is not the content of textbooks covering national and international issues: it is in many ways far more interesting, since it relates directly to us!

We can delve into places, records, magazines, libraries, archives (national and local), books and registers. We can have conversations with long-term residents and construct oral histories: we can share memories and pictures, and put together an explanations and stories relating to the area in which we live.

Coxwold Local History Society has flourished for almost a decade, and over this time we have run several events, including an exhibition and curated much archive material.

We now need more active members to ensure we stay relevant, vibrant and motivated.

Please contact us with a view to appreciating more fully what we do. Whatever your interest, be it ancient, medieval or modern history, you will find support and shared enthusiasm for your topic. You can see some of our recent activities on these pages. Then hopefully you will join us in our quarterly meetings, annual projects and support our occasional presentations.

Simon LeGassicke
Chair

simon.le.gassicke@gmail.com

John Robinson
Secretary

jdr40130@gmail.com